I guess we asked for it, but The Star certainly got into something when it published the Soldiers Mail-Away Edition Saturday with pictures of the Second Army maneuvers in southwest Arkansas. The soldiers stormed the newspaper office, two newspaper booths downtown—and today we have extra help transcribing countless names for the mailing-room wrappers.

Kotmk Troops Take Offensive in War Games

Red Army Opens Frontal Attack as Blues Withdraw Toward Camden

By T. S. ADAMS
WITH THE SECOND ARMY IN SOUTHWEST ARKANSAS (AP)—The red Kotmk troops of the Second Army, which invaded the blue Almat (Arkansas, Louisiana, Alabama, and Tennessee) Monday opened a broad frontal attack on the blue army corps of the Second Army in Southwest Arkansas and extended a wide flanking move around the blue line from Blevins to Washington to Hope.

Fourth Problem
And thus was posed for 75,000 Seventh corps men caught in pincers the fourth problem of the maneuvers—the problem of withdrawals to pre-arranged positions toward Camden.

The withdrawal, held for maximum coordination between three divisions holding the front and the 75th field artillery brigade which pulled up to support the successful Almat drive of last week. The whole operation put to test one of the most delicate maneuvers of the art of war under the eyes of umpires.

Supplies Moved East
The first reversal of Almat strategy was provided when supply trains and field kitchens were moved eastward from the front. Engineering units and reserve infantry moved forward, the former to prepare demolitions to impede the enemy and the latter to fight a rear-guard action.

Almat artillery backing up the battle line redoubled its fire to cover the shift of troops and to conceal the withdrawal. The enemy, represented by the (Ohio) 10th cavalry is presumed to have 8 divisions in action, striking hardest at the 35th which is holding the center of the line and exerting ever increasing pressure, and was held on the north and south flank.

Leatherneck Lore
From the hills of Montana to the shores of Tripoli, and now Ireland, the U. S. Marines continue to keep the situation well in hand. See if you can successfully land on the answers to these questions about the leathernecks.

1. Who did the Marines fight at Tripoli? Italians, Nazis, Pirates or Tuffy Wuzzies? When did this engagement occur?

2. What is the Latin motto of the U. S. Marines, and what does it mean?

3. Do the Marines have an air corps?

4. America's first shot in the World War was fired by a Marine. Where was this?

5. Besides Ireland, where are U. S. Marines now stationed?

Much Activity in City Over the Week-End

Soldier Badly Hurt, One Robbery, Six Stolen Cars Reported

Records of the police department Monday showed that activities over the week-end surpassed anything experienced here in many years when thousands of Second Army soldiers on leave crowded into town.

The department reported one robbery, six stolen cars and an accident which resulted in the amputation of a soldier's leg and arm.

One Badly Hurt
Pvt. Angel A. Arguinzoni, 24, of Brooklyn, New York, member of Company E, 105th Infantry regiment, was hurt seriously late Sunday afternoon when struck by a train on a switch track in the Missouri Pacific yards near the Southern Ice plant.

A large plate glass window in the Perkins' Jewelry store on South Walnut street, was broken about 11 o'clock Sunday night and an unidentified robber made way with four watches valued at $80.

Military, local and state police immediately surrounded the block but failed to find the robber. Several witnesses said the robber was a soldier.

Six Autos Stolen
A total of six automobiles, including a large truck, were stolen over the week-end. All but two have been recovered by state and local police.

One of the automobiles, a new Packard, was found near Washington badly wrecked.

Police said some of the soldiers would steal the cars and drive them to their camps, leaving them parked. Most of the stolen cars were not hurt.

Cafes, eating houses and drink stands completely sold out early Saturday night and were forced to close. Some restaurants and opened up again on Sunday while others remained closed throughout the day.

Military police aided city, state and county officials in keeping everyone as orderly as possible.

Uncle Sam Counter-Attacks Against the Axis in Vital Campaign for the Trade of Latin America

German 'World Travelers' Got Tremendous Head Start

The Axis powers are waging two wars—a "shooting" war in Europe and a "suitcase war"—with an army of secret salesmen—on the economic front. They made considerable progress under an elaborate plan for economic domination of Latin America. But Uncle Sam is catching up. In "Suitcase War in Latin America," Peter Edson, NEA Service Washington correspondent, tells in six straight-from-the-shoulder articles how this vital trade war is being waged. . . the early Axis victories. . . Uncle Sam's gradual awakening to the danger. . . his current counterattack, which is making up lost ground and more. The first of Edson's information-rich articles appear below.

By PETER EDSON
NEA Service Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON — To get an idea of what Uncle Sam's job is in South America, there is no better place to begin than by having a look at what Germany did before this country officially got to work in its all-out program of economic warfare.

The German effort to make South America Nazi territory began in 1933, just after Mr. Hitler took over. That was about the time the American Good Neighbor policy was first heard of, but whereas the U. S. official and diplomatic policy consisted largely of noble ideals, beautiful thoughts and good resolutions, the Nazis went to work without making speeches.

It was no haphazard effort. It was a definite Four Year Plan, conceived with characteristic Nazi thoroughness and attention to detail. In its initial efforts, it took the form of a double drive.

First and most innocent appearing was the organization of the Society of World Travelers. In Germany they were known as Weltwandler, but in South America they were known as the Vagabundos. There were 9000 of them assigned to South America alone.

They traveled singly or in pairs or parties and to all intents they were nothing more than tourists. They didn't have any too much money, they weren't any too well dressed. They carried cameras, they took snapshots all over the place, and they had the curiosity, the insatiable lust for information that marks him in front of the Sphinx or the sacred temples of the sun in Teotihuacan. They took notes.

They collected visas to prove to their Fuehrer that they had covered their assignments.

"Tourists" and "Salesmen" Were More Than That
They took in the city, and they took in the country. They traveled by rail or on horseback or they hiked, with Indian guides, through jungles. They took river boats or they paddled their own canoes.

Arriving at some hacienda or mine far in the interior, they would flash their passports with the equivalent of a "look where all we've been" smile. Impressed, the hospitable South Americans took them into their arms, into their homes—to stay two weeks or months as guests of the management. Many of the tourists were good mechanics or engineers. Visiting some remote estate where the pump had broken down or the home lighting plant was busted or the trucks or motor cars needed overhauling, the grateful guests would pitch in to make repairs and tune things up in a way that baffled the inexperienced native Indian help.

That was the picture all over South America. Vagabundos out to see the world, manifesting a lively interest in everything that went on, taking pictures, taking notes for their scrapbooks.

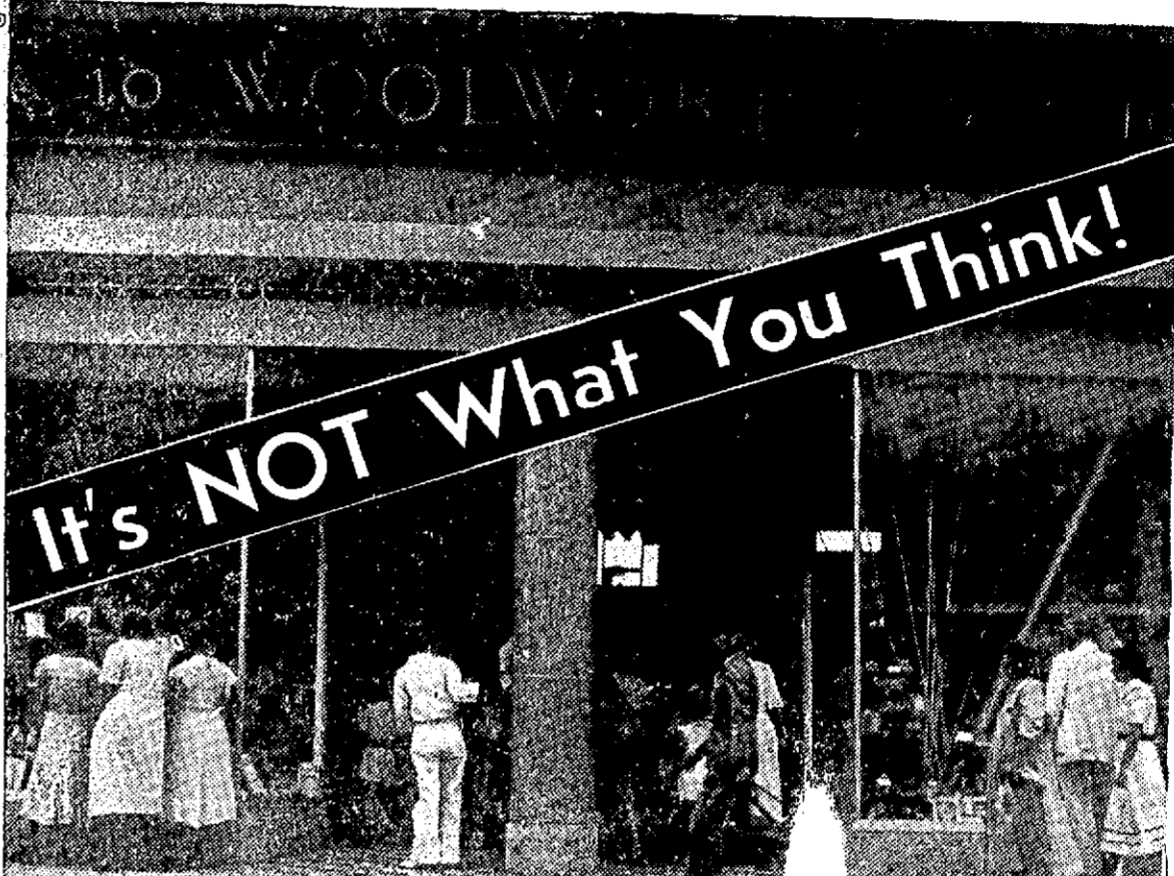

At the end of 1935 all 9000 of them were called back to Germany, their information classified, catalogued, and the studios, brainy Nazi government in Berlin began making a new map for the economic conquest of South America.

The experiences of the first 9000 were used to train and educate another 9000 and in 1936 all 18,000 of them went back to help finish the job.

Hardly a better symbol of brazen Axis commercial aggression in Latin America can be found than the photo above, taken in Panama City. You may think it shows the front of one of a world-famous North American five-and-ten-cent store chain. You're wrong. It is a blatant imitation, set up by Axis interests. They have "unclassified" stacks Japanese and German goods, many cheap counterfeits of U. S. merchandise.

To Bar Traffic on Highway 67

Civilian Traffic Warned to Stay Off Monday Night

Highway 67 between Prescott and Hope will be blocked from 7 Monday night to 4 a. m. Tuesday because of Second Army troop movements.

State Police headquarters advised motorists to "go a long way" in avoiding the Hope-Prescott area. Nearby detours will be impossible because other highways and country roads will be closed for the soldiers.

Travelers going from Little Rock to south and southwest Arkansas were advised to follow Highway 67 to Benton, 70 to Hot Springs and Glenwood and 27 to Murfreesboro. This route offers connections with Highway 71 to Texarkana.

Another alternate route previously mentioned, Highway 87 south, will be crowded by convoys today. It is not being recommended.

State Police said all major highways leading into Little Rock will be heavily convoyed today. Vehicles here will be northbound as well as southbound. Civilians should avoid the highways if possible, it was said.

The Little Rock Police Department's Traffic Bureau advised motorists to use Garland avenue, which passes under the Broadway bridge. Broadway will have heavy troop movements most of the day.

Postoffice on Daylight Saving

Windows Open to Public 7 a. m. to 6 p. m. DST

With Daylight Saving Time in effect in Hope Monday morning postmaster Robert M. Wilson cautioned postoffice patrons to remember that windows at the postoffice will open an hour earlier and close an hour earlier than formerly.

Window service will be maintained from 7 a. m. to 6 p. m. Daylight Saving Time, which is equivalent to 8 a. m. to 5 p. m. Central Standard Time.

Carrier deliveries, and deposit of mail in postoffice boxes, will run about an hour later than formerly, since these deliveries are governed by railroad schedules—and the railroads operate on Standard time.

Nazis Checked by Huge Tanks

Russians Report Successful Counter Attacks

By the Associated Press
General Red army counter attacks with huge tanks and masses of infantry and swift striking cavalry were reported to have checked the German onslaught toward Leningrad Monday.

The Russians said that one Rumanian and two German divisions were routed and three other Rumanian divisions lost 26,000 men. The ponderous Russian tanks were said to have spearheaded a counter attack across the battlefield where Nazi drives were checked near Kingssepp and Novgorod.

The Russians said the attack on Leningrad from the north had been renewed with fierce fighting near Katsinai.

A German drive was forced back by a Red counter attack in the Gomel sector between Smolensk and Kiev and Russian cavalry recaptured a town in the Dnieper river bend the Russians said.

Reports said a large scale battle was shaping up there for control of the hydro-electric center of Dnieper-Petrovsk where the Russian defenders still held the west banks of the Dnieper river.

The Soviet tanks were said to have smashed 135 light German tanks in a bloody fight south and southwest of Leningrad and on the central front near the Gomel area the Russians said they left more than 100 Nazi armored vehicles destroyed.

In the face of the Russian claims the German high command ventured only a brief general statement:

"Operations in the east are making progress everywhere."

Claims U. S. Knew
BERLIN.—(AP)—The belief that Russia and British forces moved into Iran after getting the official nod from Washington was expressed Monday night in the Berlin press.

The newspapers held that the U. S. is deeply involved and that it is sure to have been informed on all plans concerning Iran at the Atlantic meeting of President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill.

Only Informal Talks With Japs

Hull Asserts U. S. Not to Compromise on Policies

WASHINGTON — (AP) — Secretary of State Hull said Monday that there was only informal talks with Japan concerning differences in the Pacific and indicated the unwillingness by the U. S. to compromise in anyway on principles and policies.

He said that his informal conversation Saturday with the Japanese ambassador was typical of the talks being held.

Prime Minister Churchill's pointed emphasis on the situation in the Far East attracted much attention here for the Prime Minister seemed to intimate that the danger of trouble between the United States and Japan was greater than that between Britain and Japan.

Asserts Drive Is Aimed to Oust Germans

Iran's Army of 190,000 Men Reported Resisting Combined Forces

LONDON — (AP) — Iran's army of 190,000 men was reported authoritatively Monday to be resisting British-Russian invading forces, spreading the war across that rich oil field kingdom wedged between the Persian Gulf and Caspian sea.

The extent of the engagement or the location was not disclosed.

(A German wireless broadcasting an Ankara, Turkey dispatch saying that troops had clashed already from the Caucasian border, the point of entry for Soviet troops.)

Veteran British desert fighters moved east and north from Iraq and from the Persian Gulf and formed a frontier threat at Baluchistan, which lies southeast of Iran.

Ships Land Troops
Some British troops were landed from ships in the Persian Gulf. Russian cosacks and mounted infantry made up the forces moving toward British forces in an invasion over plains and mountains.

Theousting of German agents was announced by the British-Russian aim. From Cairo, British Middle East headquarters, it was reported that Indian mechanized forces were strongly supported by the RAF in a vanguard of the invasion.

Authorized London sources said some of the British troops have landed from ships at Bandar Shapur at the head of the Persian gulf.

Planes
Opposing the invaders was an army estimated to consist of 19 divisions of approximately 10,000 men each. Cairo sources said Iranian artillery was mainly of Swedish make and that the arms included light and heavy machine guns. There are a few German tanks and the airforce consist of a single Tomahawk plane and a dozen hurricanes, the sources said. They predicted a brief campaign saying Iranians were poor airmen.

Some British estimates of the total number of German tourists and technicians in Iran rose as high as 8,000 although Iranian police say only 500 German men were in the country.

The Russians moved down from the north and the British from the west and south. Their prime objective was to win a race against time and prevent sabotage of vital oil pipelines and fields by German specialists alleged to have infiltrated into Iran.

The chief purpose of the Russians was to secure the USSR's southern area "side door" frontier from possible disrupted influences of German fifth columnists in Iran which Russians have said are attempting to upset the country as Iraq was.

The British operations are directed by Sir Archibald Wavell, newly appointed commander in India, who led the brilliant British campaign in Libya.

British sources doubted that Iran resistance would stand up on a major scale and is counting on diplomacy to win as much as arms. Diplomatic quarters said every effort would be made by British ambassador Sir Redding Bullard, at Tehran, the Iran capital, to convince the Iranians of the futility and waste of fighting both Britain and Russia.

attaches in the 21 American Republics, but for the most part, the official representatives of the United States government are on the payroll of the Department of State—the legation diplomatic staffs and the consular commercial staffs.

There are perhaps miles of their reports in files lined up in neat rows in Washington. Mostly superficial and routine, they probably represent one of the greatest collections of useless information ever assembled. Such information as happens to be there has not been catalogued or coordinated.

Less than a year ago, the Department of Commerce woke up to the fact that the economic intelligence reports from Latin America were just plain lousy. The full import of the German effort to take over the South American markets was beginning to sink in.

Jesse Jones, Federal Loan Administrator and also Secretary of Commerce since Harry Hopkins gave up the job, came down to the conclusion that if the Germans were smart enough to wage this anti-American economic war, the North Americans were smart enough to beat them to pro-American economic defense.

Jones and his lieutenant, Wayne Chaffield Taylor, moved in on the Department of Commerce in pretty strenuous style. It wasn't just the South American division of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce that was given a going over, but the whole department.

Systematically and without much publicity or fanfare, Jones has given the works about as thorough a reorganization as any federal department has had since 1932. Certainly, it is the biggest change the Department of Commerce has had since Herbert Hoover took it in charge 20 years ago.

For the South American job, Jones has chosen William LaVarre, a newcomer to government circles, but a man who, as an explorer, knows the hot spots of South and Central America from Agua Caliente to Tierra del Fuego.

From 1921 to 1924, he directed his own expeditions, discovering gold and diamonds in British Guiana, oil in Venezuela, and exploring the headwaters of the Amazon. For a few years, he was in the newspaper business in South Carolina, but in 1930 he went back to South America to survey Dutch Guiana for bauxite and cinchona.

Since that time he has traveled all through Latin America, writing articles which he has placed in North American newspapers, through his own syndicate, and returning to the States for a few months lecturing each year, to raise money to take him back for further exploring in South America. He speaks Spanish and Portuguese, knows the people and their ways, knows what mistakes gringos make, and can continue to make, when they go south.

Chief of Staff in U. S.
Economic War

LaVarre was in South America practically all the time the German Vagabundos and suitcase salesmen were making their rounds, and the details of how they took over are his. LaVarre has been on the job in Washington since June. His title is Chief of the American Republics Unit in the Division of International Economy, Department of Commerce. He is also Commerce's representative on the new Economic Defense Board Committee on Inter-American Affairs, created by the President's Executive Order on July 31.

He had no intention and no ambition to enter the government service when he came to Washington last spring to get his passport visas and say good-bye to his friends in the State and Commerce departments, before going on another South American jaunt. Jones tapped him for the job in Washington.

Today, the American Republics Unit is one of the liveliest spots in the Department of Commerce. Trade with the rest of the world is frozen, isolated, or so highly militarized that it can hardly be called commerce. But

Bubba Smart Favored to Take El Dorado Match

EL DORADO—Richard "Bubba" Smart of Pine Bluff likely will be favored in an approximate field of 100 golfers from Arkansas, Louisiana and Texas which will tee off here next Saturday in the 16th annual Oil Belt Golf tournament at the El Dorado Country Club.

Qualifying play in the tournament started Saturday and many rounds are expected to be played Sunday and through the week before the meet.

Among outstanding players expected to enter the tournament are Paul Denson of Pine Bluff, 1939 winner; W. H. Blackledge Jr., Port Arthur, Tex., 1940 champion; Sherm Girault of Monroe, La., 1937 runner up and Charles Woodward of Magnolia, 1940 runner up. Art Kuhn of Camden, medalist in last year's meet, also is expected to enter.

The El Dorado contingent will be headed by James McWilliams, 1937 champion, and J. D. Trimble, 1934 titleist. M. P. Matheny, runner up in the 1938 meet also will enter.

The pro-amateur event, scheduled for Saturday afternoon, Aug. 30, is expected to draw several professionals from the tri-state area. Jimmy McGonigall of Shreveport, teamed with Edwin McClure, amateur from Shreveport, to win this event the last time it was held in 1938.

Match play in the tournament will begin Sunday morning, Aug. 31 in light of 14 players each and will continue through four rounds, ending Labor Day. H. S. Yocum, president of the El Dorado club, will award prize money and trophies following flight championship and consolation rounds. Prizes will be awarded to the winner and the runner up and consolation winner in each flight, to the tourney medalist and to the club entering the most players.

Prizes valued at $500 will be given to amateur winners and $75 in cash will be split among the three top professionals in the pro-amateur event.

A varied program of entertainment has been planned by the tournament committee composed of Sam Battersson, chairman; W. C. Price, Frank Spaw, R. Y. McKinney and J. S. Brooks. A dance will be held at the club house Saturday night and a supper will be served on the lawn of the club Sunday evening.

E. S. Minea, El Dorado professional, is in charge of events and entries.

Brewers Pay Arkansas Farmers $750,000 For Rice During 1940

A recent report shows that the brewing industry in 1940 bought from Arkansas' fourteen rice producing counties a total of 25,000,000 pounds of rice valued at $750,000! Because the brewing industry uses only the highest grade of grains for the brewing of fine beers, it is providing Arkansas farmers with a profitable, nearby market for their best grades of rice.

Such large purchases by one industry certainly assure direct benefits to the Arkansas rice farmer—benefits which should be protected. The loss of this important market would be a staggering blow to the Arkansas rice industry. In fact, replacing this market would prove extremely difficult!

Beer Benefits Many Groups of Arkansas Citizens

Arkansas farmers are but one of the many groups profiting from the "beverage of moderation." Besides beer paying Arkansas over a million dollars in taxes each year, wholesale and retail beer establishments employ 9,000 Arkansas citizens and pay them annually a total of $7,000,000.

In addition, the beer industry enriches the following Arkansas industries:

Automobile	Transportation
Aluminum	Lumber
Petroleum	Paint
Refrigeration	Cool
Real Estate	Machinery
Electric Power	Communication
Printing	Furniture

You Can Help Protect These Benefits

Arkansas cannot afford to let a few "black sheep" retailers endanger an industry that brings such important benefits to the community. To control these "black sheep," the Brewers and Arkansas Beer Distributors Committee continues its vigilant inspections of retail outlets selling beer. You can aid in helping to protect these direct benefits of the beer industry by patronizing only the orderly, law-abiding places meeting your own high standard of approval.

BROOKLYN, N. Y.—(AP)—Police charged Leon Fleisher with violating the anti-litter section of the park ordinance. He was accused of bringing a newspaper to Prospect park to sit on.

Magistrate Charles Colomon couldn't see it. He ruled: "Merely sitting on a paper is no violation of the law. A man has a right to protect himself from dampness."

WANT-AD ROMANCE

CHAPTER I

SECRETARY-RECEPTIONIST, young, attractive, capable; must keep books. Apply in person to 2060 Simpson Bldg.

THE dark-eyed girl circled the help wanted ad with a heavy, black line. Similar circles were scattered over the page. She read on, poised her pencil, changed her mind, then abruptly folded the newspaper.

"That's enough to keep me walking until midnight," she said, half aloud. "And probably every single job will be taken just five minutes before I get there."

"You talking to me, Miss?" She had not noticed the young man at the far end of the park bench.

"No. Oh, no!" She could feel her cheeks color; she knew her neck was crimson. Why should she blush because a stranger asked a civil question? She opened the paper again, stared at it without seeing words.

He was a nice looking fellow—not a park bench loafer. Some youngster, just out of college, looking for his first job. Possibly a football player, she decided, eyeing him from the protection of the paper. Well, he should have no trouble finding a job—at least not as much trouble as she was having.

THE boy at the end of the bench looked up, caught her staring at him, grinned.

"Any luck? I see you're reading want-ads, too."

The grin forced her answer. How could this brother-in-unemployment sit there and grin as if he owned the world? He wouldn't think life quite so funny if he had no more money than she had in her purse.

"Nothing much," she answered at last, trying to make her voice sound a little friendly. "I walk and walk, and every place I go, I find the job has just been filled."

"Tough," he agreed. He extended a package of cigarettes. "Have one?"

She shook her head. "Never learned how."

"Wish I hadn't." He blew smoke toward a cloud. "Wish I didn't have to go looking for a job. Much rather just sit here in the sun, talk to you." He said the last words so softly she hardly heard him.

"It's a grand day for park bench sitting," she agreed. "But no work, no eat. And I get hungry."

"Don't go," he asked. "I really want to talk to you—to someone." The grin flashed on again. She determined not to let it influence her again.

"I'm no masher—no park-bench Romeo"—he was like a child asking her to help him—"I won't even ask your name and address. I've just been fired and I want to talk to someone to get a little confidence. You can leave any time."

It was difficult to refuse. "Well . . . I—" she began.

"That's fine! I knew I could count on you. I'm Ted Andrews, up to one hour and 33 minutes ago, by that tower clock, the super-salesman for Acme Ace-High folding card tables. Easy to set up. Guaranteed rigid. The plastic-ber cover is resistant to liquids, heat, everything but acid and forgotten cigarettes. Ace-High is always winner."

"I don't see why they fired you," she laughed. "You've practically sold me an Ace-High card table."

"They'll be coming after me," Andrews bragged, "begging me to come back, at probably double my salary. But I'm not going back, at any price. I'm through with Ace-High tables. Wait until old Archibald tries to find another salesman as good as I am."

He was so self-confident, so sure of himself, she did not have the heart to laugh. "Why did this—this Archibald fire you?"

"Just because I had an idea—a

The young man was paying no attention to her. She noted he was reading the classified pages, too. He was a nice-looking fellow—not a park bench loafer. really great advertising stunt for Ace-High tables. But I had a little bad luck.

"You know how people at a circus like to watch a clown sway back and forth on a high tower of tables and chairs? I was going to do that—not sway—but I built a tower of Ace-High tables on the sidewalk right in front of the store. Ten of 'em. Had to get a ladder to set them up."

"Then, while thousands of people watched—" He caught her smile. "There were at least 300," he admitted. "—while they watched, I climb onto a window onto the top table. Cops arrive and tell me to come down. Traffic jams . . . The sidewalk is blocked. I tell the cops, and the crowd, that I'm out to prove that Ace-High tables stand up under any strain."

"More people stop and gawk. More cops. Reporters. Photographers. It's almost as good as flagpole sitting. Then—it happened."

"What?"

"Old Ace-High let me down, and completely. I fell through the top of the highest table, legs collapsed, tables tumbled every where. A cop got a bump on his head when I landed on him with a table around my middle. Four persons were hit by falling tables, all injured. Two women fainted. The show window was cracked. I was arrested for inciting a riot, disturbing the peace and assaulting an officer."

"I didn't go back to work until this morning—I left again, almost immediately."

The girl made no effort to hide her laughter now. "I can see you, on top of 10 card tables."

"I'd laughed, too. 'It was a swell idea,' he insisted, 'but I'm glad it didn't work. That stunt is going to cost old Archibald all the salary he didn't pay me.' I turned to the girl. 'How about you? No flagpole sitting?'"

SHE shook her head. "No stunt, no crowd, no tables. I just get tired of the same old daily routine. I've been working for a doctor in Sumner, a little town downstate, for five years. Ever since I left high school I've been listening to people cry about their aches and pains about their bills. So I came to the city to find a new job."

"And you'll probably find one—working for a doctor again." The young man surveyed her closely.

"Nice figure. You could model, if you want to. Now tell us your story, with or without names, as you prefer. What do you really want to do?"

"I don't want to be a secretary-receptionist."

"Okay. That's out. What is the favorite ambition?"

"I don't want to work at all," she answered truthfully. "I've worked ever since I can remember. Dad wasn't much good, I guess, and Mother went home to her family. She would have done better to have stayed with Dad, because she spent the rest of her life trying to make a living for herself and little Kay. Her brother helped a little, mostly by finding new customers for her to sew for, and housework and odd jobs for me."

"When Mother died, Uncle Ralph got this job in the doctor's office for me. I lived with him and Aunt Susan and four cousins. Everything I earned went for room and board. I had to help around the house, too. It wasn't much fun."

"So you finally told him off and started out on your own, and now the going's tough. Ted concluded for her. 'Why did you pick on this town? Why not try New York, Chicago? What brought you here?'"

"I'm looking for my Dad—Tim Donovan, the inventor. Ever hear of him?"

"Nope. What does he invent?"

"I don't know. He just invents. That's why Mother left him. None of his inventions ever paid any money, but he wouldn't quit. Mother's last letter from him came from here. He wanted her to come back. His big invention was sure to succeed. He was planning to build a factory here. Mother wrote that we would come back after the invention started paying. We never heard from him after that."

"But Ted wasn't listening. 'Tim Donovan . . . Donovan . . . I've seen that name somewhere. . . . He picked up his newspaper, scanned the classified pages again. 'And your name is Kay Donovan? Kay for Katie, not Katherine. . . .'"

"The girl was amazed. 'Why, yes. How did you know?'"

"He thrust the paper under her nose, his finger pointing to a small notice. 'There—take a look at that, Katie Donovan.'"

DIME NIGHT at the SAENGER

Wednesday, August 27

(Matinee and Night 10c, Anywhere in the House)

This Wednesday the Saenger Theater and Hope Star present the second in a series of monthly revivals of the best motion pictures made in the last 10 years, one picture to be shown each month, the admission price to be 10c for any seat in the house, matinee or night.

Thirty-six pictures have been selected out of the 5,000 films made in the last decade.

The third of these revivals, to be shown this Wednesday, matinee and night, at 10c, is —

Alexander's Ragtime Band

— Starring —

• ALICE FAYE • TYRONE POWER
• DON AMECHE

Back in the Good Old Days, when houses were lighted with kerosene lamps, and a nickel cigar was a good smoke, you could go to the movies for 5c.

We can't quite do that, but we can give you DIME NIGHT—bringing back the world's best movies at a price everybody can afford.

DIME NIGHT, once a month, is made possible by the co-operation of Hope Star in selecting the pictures and furnishing the advertising promotion; by the co-operation of the film companies in agreeing to low rentals; and the cooperation of the Malco Theaters, Inc., in agreeing to try this drastic experiment of a 10c over-all price at Hope's big theater.

The whole purpose of this DIMENIGHT series of revivals is to make available at a price every family can pay motion pictures that every family should see.

Out of the 5,000 or more pictures produced since 1931 The Star has tentatively selected 36 for the once-a-month showing. Here is the list:
